Race and ethnic studies (RACE) is an interdisciplinary program committed to the study of people of color, primarily, though not exclusively, in the United States. Our program proceeds from the recognition that race and ethnicity have been and continue to be crucial components within interlocking systems of oppression as well as powerful sites of intersectional resistance. In the U.S., our work focuses on the social, cultural, and historical contributions and lived experiences of African Americans, Native Americans, Asian Americans, Latinx, and Middle Eastern Americans. Migration — historical and contemporary, voluntary and involuntary — is an experience that unites many of these communities. As such, our program encompasses coursework involving the cultures and nations outside of the United States from which such peoples are drawn; it can also include the study of racial and ethnic minorities in other nations.

Globalization has brought greater urgency to the recognition that the economic, social, and political forces to which people of color are subjected are not limited to those that originate within the nations in which they reside. Thus, we also attend to transnational coalitions, experiences, and phenomena relevant to people of color in the United States and elsewhere.

Overview of the Major
Unlike many programs and departments, which prescribe a sequence of courses, the race and ethnic studies major provides students with considerable freedom to choose classes that fulfill their interests and often, at the same time, their general education requirements. In addition to RACE 121-122, majors complete a senior project and seven courses, one of which may focus on race and ethnicity outside of the United States. Select a minimum of seven other approved courses taken in at least three departments or programs.

Total Credits 8

1 One of the seven courses may be an independent study or research, and one may be an off-campus internship or course approved by the program director. One may also focus on race and ethnicity outside of the United States.

Race and ethnic studies majors are required to complete a senior project and to give an oral presentation of their findings before the program faculty in early May of their senior year. Study off-campus on diversity topics is encouraged. Students may wish to link a race and ethnic studies major with another one from a department represented in the program.
